3. eTag SecureDrop service

3.1 Service Update

The enhanced SecureDrop eTag service is the latest SecureDrop Alternative Delivery Service which will replace the previous SecureDrop service. Access to this service will be rolled out from September 2021 to all new and existing SecureDrop customers following a pilot rollout.

The new service has been upgraded to a paperless service, which means that the Delivery Officer will have access to the correct delivery instructions upon scanning the eTag at a property and instead of a card through the letterbox advising of a successful delivery, SecureDrop customers will now receive real-time delivery notifications by text and/or email as soon as an item is delivered. Customers without a text or email communication preference will continue to receive a card through the letter box advising of successful delivery.

By accepting these Terms and Conditions, you have in turn signed the declaration described in section 1.4, giving Jersey Post permission to affix an eTag to your property in close approximation to your normal letter delivery point.

3.2 eTag

- The electronic tag or eTag is a unique digital marker for the geographical location of your property and provides Jersey Post with delivery information to a property. On arrival at a property, Jersey Post Delivery Officers will scan the eTag for information on the designated secure location to leave items.
- The eTag technology is “NFC” (Near Field Communication) which is a contactless communication based on a radio frequency (RF) field. This type of technology is also used in hotel key cards and contactless bank cards.

- The scanning of the eTag by Jersey Post will prompt an alert to you or the Named User of proof of delivery sent via email and/or text, dependant on the preferred method of contact. It is the customer’s responsibility to ensure Jersey Post hold the correct contact details and preferences for notifications.

3.3 Security of the eTag

The information held against the tags is stored remotely and the eTags do not store any readable personal or delivery information. Access to instructions associated with the eTag is encrypted and only readable by our Delivery Officers using Jersey Post handheld devices.

3.4 Affixing the eTag

The eTags are discreet and are affixed using a mild adhesive. The designated Delivery Officer will make an informed judgement on the colour of the eTag which will be as closely matched to the surface that the eTag is being applied to.

3.5 Change of address

If a SecureDrop customer moves property to a new address, they are required to be informed by our Delivery Officers. The eTag will remain in situ and the relevant information saved against that property will be updated. The eTag will not move to the new address with the SecureDrop customer, instead a new eTag will be affixed to the new property if required.

3.6 Service Requirements

Once the new service has been rolled out to your area then Jersey Post will be unable to continue with the SecureDrop service without the use of an eTag. Refusal to affix an eTag to a property will result in the SecureDrop service not being available to that property and anyone residing at that address.

3.7 Replacement of eTags and Liability

Jersey Post may occasionally replace eTags if they become weathered or are unable to be read by our Delivery Officers. If the Occupier removes the eTag and damages the surrounding area, Jersey Post holds no responsibility and will not repair the damage caused. All eTags will be replaced free of charge.
